

Press Release 3rd January 2011

EyeMags – support for the Android native Apps

EyeMags (eyemags.com), the mobile content apps generator for all mobile phones and devices, announces today native apps support for the Android 2.1 and above. EyeMags now has comprehensive support for nearly every phone and mobile device on the market from iPad, iPhone, and most other phones.

The Android solution now involves native apps. Google recently announced App Inventor which does something similar. Unlike App Inventor these apps can be put on Android Market and once created the EyeMags system also generates the apps for most other phone models too. For iPhone the apps are HTML5 installed webapps, but for an extra optional fee these apps can be converted to native iPhone apps too and hosted by iTunes.

Robin Jewsbury CEO of EyeMags said “Anyone who has great content that they want to deliver to mobile phones should consider eyemags.com as the platform to deliver their content and make money from it. They can experiment with the platform for free. If they want to make money by selling their apps then contact us at info@eyemags.net and we can get them making money from appstores all over the world.”

About Alibro Ltd

Alibro was formed in Oct 2009 as a spin off from the 4 year old VC funded startup RefreshMobile Ltd (with Mippin.com as their product). Alibro was founded by Robin Jewsbury, who was the co-founder of RefreshMobile. Alibro’s purpose is to further the development of EyeMags.com and become the You-tube for Mobile Apps.